Business Valuation: Selling a Business

As an entrepreneur, a crucial aspect of owning your business is establishing an exit strategy. There are many effective ways to close a business once it matures, including selling the business. Selling a business is the process of transferring ownership and control of a company from one party to another. This involves a structured approach to evaluating the business's worth, attracting potential buyers, negotiating terms and much more. While it can be difficult to put a price on years of hard work, it is important to separate feelings from facts in order to be successful in the transaction. Calculating business valuation can help assure owners that the selling price for their business reflects its value.
